Abstract

To facilitate officers of the Operations Group to plan ahead their targets and come up with the vision of the Corps by 2020, an one-day Colloquium will be organised to enable officers to share their views on the challenges faced by their respective squadrons/units, identify strategies to overcome those challenges and set key performance targets to be achieved in the coming three-year horizon (2017-2020).

The theme for this Colloquium is “Engaging Young People in Hong Kong – Equipping HKACC for 2020”. Unlike young people in the 1980s and 1990s, the new generation has plenty of choices when talking about how to spend their spare time outside school. In addition to regular extra-curricular activities, youngsters are “required” to attend interest classes and participate in activities that will help them build up a good CV for further education and career; or they choose to spend their time on social media without interacting with their peers face-to-face. Conventional youth activities, particularly uniformed groups, may no longer be attractive to our young people. How should the Corps adapt to and cope with the prevailing social atmosphere, and remain as a quality choice for young people who would like to develop leadership skills, in particular those who would like to be exposed to the opportunities in the aviation sector?
